

Achilles

Achilles was described as the greatest Greek warrior in the Trojan War. A nymph held him by the ankle and dipped him in the River Styx. That made almost his entire body invincible. His only weak spot was his heel, which didn't get dipped in the water. Perseus killed the eldest son of the King of Troy in battle. He himself was later killed when an arrow struck him in his vulnerable heel.