

What does it take to make a boat float?

A ship sinks into the water until the weight of the water it moves out of the way equals the weight of the ship. Ships are usually created with a large volume, but very thin sides. This ensures that the water displaced is heavier than the ship.